PRESENTATION OF THE CONFERENCE

The 30th Conference of Italian Association of Cell Culture (AICC) will take place in Milan on November 27-28, 2017 at the Fondazione IRCCS Istituto Nazionale dei Tumori, the Cancer Centre cradle of Italian oncology.

Tumors comprise not only cancerous but also normal cells that, as stromal components, actively participate to tumor progression and metastatization. Among them, tumor-driven immune cells are potent allies in sustaining tumor growth.

The conference will focus on the role of immune cells in tumor development and progression and on the possible strategies to re-educate tumor-promoting leukocytes toward anti-tumor functions.

The meeting is organized in two days with 5 thematic sessions, national and international speakers, leaders in their scientific fields, an opening and a closing lecture and selected abstract oral presentations. Sessions will cover different topics: immunosuppression, immunotherapy, tumor microenvironment in hematological tumors, tumor metabolism and new tools for modeling tumor-stroma interaction.

New insights into basic, translational and clinical research will be discussed, to provide an opportunity of interaction and collaboration among participants.

We hope the Conference will be of your interest and look forward to meeting you in Milan.
